Regular season

The regular season will consist of 15 weeks, beginning in week 1 of the NFL season.

Each team will play heads up agains two other teams each week (double head to head).

For a team to be eligible for the Highest player week score, the player in question must have been on the team's active lineup during the week where the high score was achieved.

Rules

Post season

The post season tournaments will be palyed during weeks 16 & 17 of the NFL season.

Seeding - Four teams advance to the Super Bowl

Four teams advance to the super bowl using the following priority:

- 1st - win/loss record
- 1st - total points
- 2nd - win/loss
- 2nd - total points
- 3rd - win/loss
- 3rd - total points
- 4th - win/loss

All remaining teams are seeded to the toilet bowl.

Format (Both post season competitions use the same format)

- All teams compete in a royal rumble (All vs. All)
 - Post season scores are accumulated over a period of two NFL game weeks beginning in week 16. (The final week [18] of the NFL season will not be used).
 - All rules concerning rosters, scoring, lineups, etc. used in the regular season carry forward through the post season. Any rule not specifically altered for post season play is assumed to be the same as any similar occurance during the regular season.

Trades

- The trade deadline is kickoff of the first game of week 13
- There is no approval authority for trades. However, if a majority of the league suspects collusion, all players involved in the trade will be suspended from use in the team's active roster for a period of two weeks to be served as follows:
 - One week immediately following the ruling
 - Week 16 (the first week of playoffs) The consideration of such a punishment should be taken up only in cases of obvious foul play and should be done as promptly as reasonably possible after the disputed trade. The accused team owners have a vote by right. This should create an effective guard against frivolous accusations.

Waivers

- The free agent period begins on Wednesday morning at 2AM, Pacific
- A dropped player is on waivers and is not available as a free agent for a period of 2 days
- Roster moves are not allowed for a player once his team has begun a game and will be frozen until the beginning of the next waiver period
